

BETWEEN THE FLATIRONS

"HARRY to Hattie!" proposed the Tailor-Made.

"Hattie!" echoed a long line of Johnnies, and glasses were drained to the last drop.

Hattie who?

Why, Hattie Forythe, she who blazes bravely in the front line of the Weber-Fields chorus and knows all the New York Johnnies who are worth knowing by their front names.

Because of her superior knowledge, Miss Forythe was feverishly sought by a newspaper reporter in San Francisco and begged to tell the difference between "Frisco and New York Johnnies. What she said may well cause the local brotherhood to drink her health and take another satisfied look at themselves in the mirror.

We call a few of her brightest thoughts:

"This is what happened last night. The telephone rang for us and there was a man at the other end who said he wanted to meet us and intended to do so. I asked him to consider our inclination in the matter and hung up. That was so crude!

"There is another thing I've noticed about San Francisco men. They think they are honoring you with their invitations to supper or a drive. Now, it's quite the reverse in New York. The men there are flattered when we accept. Of course we do know the finest boys in New York, and we can meet whom we choose.

"No wonder it has been stupid for us here. Frankly, we are terribly disappointed. We had always heard the men here had plenty of money. Western generosity is a dream.

"Harry a Johnny? No, thank you, not for me. I would never marry a man until he had outgrown Johnnyism. Of course some of them never do, but, fortunately, most Johnnies become men as they grow older. I like a fellow thirty-five or forty years old, and when I marry it will be a real man."

New, wouldn't that make you grow old?

The 'ello did not sing this night. It simply squeaked.

As the curtain ascends on the second act of "Candy," there is a fine Eugene Marchbanks, the poet, is "discovered" reading aloud poems—"anybody's poems," as he says. To give feeling to the scene the 'cello of the orchestra gives forth from beneath the stage a tender refrain. But this time the 'cello appeared to be all out of tenderness. It sounded like a cat having trouble in the family.

"What was it?" shrieked Mr. Daly as he rushed downstairs.

"I don't know," answered the property man, "unless it was the cello I gave the fiddle. You know, we were ordered to fireproof everything!"

"Among all the things which this most remarkable season has brought forth," said William H. Thompson, "is the statement that the young and pretty player is the only type which the theatre-going public cares to see behind the footlights. It has been said to me time and again by various managers that plays which did not make a young, pretty woman their star or a handsome, manly young chap, its leading character could not succeed in New York."

"The idea is absurd," I told him. The season has proved that I was right. Look over the list of those who are getting the money in New York to-day and see who they are. While I dislike to talk about myself, I am free to confess I am an old-timer, and so is W. J. Ferguson, yet "The Secret of Polichinelle" is doing well. Ada Rehan and Otto Reinher drew such crowds to the Lyric Theatre that enough people were turned away at every performance to fill a small house, and they are certainly old-timers. Kyrie Bellew belongs to this brigade also, and he will celebrate his 150th performance in a day or two. Richard Mansfield is another, and William Gillette is certainly no boy."

Deadful story from Riverside Drive! Young women in fashionable private school turn themselves into saloons!

It should not be understood by this that they have contracted the drink habit. It's even worse than that. They have acquired the amateur theatrical habit. Just now they are playing "The Virginian." Their strong scene is the killing of Trampas. One young lady gives such a good imitation of Frank Compton's death struggle that it is no longer funny. But the "saloons" are funny. They are girls, stationed along the "street," and they do say the scenery is beautiful.

It is with a throb of pleasure, not unmixed with national pride, that we paste this on a sheet and rush it to the eager compositor:

"Marion Winchester, the young American dancer who went abroad last spring to dance in the music halls of London and Paris, in a recent beauty contest in the French capital was awarded the beauty prize, after much hesitation and wavering on the part of the judges toward Liane De Pougy. Miss Winchester is tall and slender, with great wistful brown eyes and black lashes and light brown hair. This combination seems to have struck the Parisians forcibly, and Miss Winchester looks for a renewal of her triumph in London, where she will play a return engagement at the Palace Music Hall, after which she goes to Berlin to seek fresh conquests."

Little wonder Mme. Sembrich has been smiling and happy, while other hearts and other teeth have ached at the Opera-House this season. She has such a good husband! Every time she has sung, so the story goes, Herr Stengel, seated midway in the house, has told her by a system of signals whether she was singing right or singing wrong. And then, through the storm of applause and the booming of "Bravos!" he has hurried madly to the stage and waited to fold her in fond embrace as she tripped joyously from her triumph.

An appreciative husband is a rare blessing!

WOMAN BURIED IN OLD ST. PAUL'S

Under the leaden sky, and while the throng passed heedlessly up and down Broadway, there was a quiet burial in the graveyard of Old St. Paul's Chapel to-day, which marked the passing of a woman who was a frequent pilgrim to St. Paul's and often brought flowers to place upon the vault where she now lies buried.

For the first time in years the vault of Thomas Taylor, one of New York's former bankers, who died in 1891, was opened. This time it received the body of Mrs. Sophie Buckley, aged seventy-six years, and a grand-daughter of the man whose name is carved on the slab just in the rear of the church and near the edge of the walk leading to the south gate.

Mrs. Buckley died at her home, No. 525 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. She and her aged husband made frequent visits to the vault and only a month ago, when the snow was on the ground, she went there with her husband and placed a wreath above the burial place of her family. This was her last visit until to-day, when the grave diggers silently lowered the body into its last resting place.

50c laces 15c: 10,000 sample pieces: $1.50 laces 50c

TEN THOUSAND yards of exquisitely rich sample laces at 15c for 50c, values; 25c for $1 laces and 50c for $1.50 values—is it any wonder such values will create the most remarkable period of lace selling New York has ever experienced? They go on sale to-morrow. They'll attract thousands of particular women. Dressmakers and Milliners will come from all points to purchase them because they are samples, perfect in every respect, save the edges of some are just a little soiled. They represent the newest 1904 ideas of those famous European designers.

15c for laces worth 25c up to 50c a yard. 25c for laces worth 50c up to $1 a yard. 50c for laces worth $1.50 up to 1.50 a yard.

10c a yard for 50c embroidered galleons—the immense collection of an overstocked manufacturer of shirt waists and wash suits purchased at one-half to one-fifth the retail value. All 20c, 25c, 35c and 50c embroideries are included in the exceptional prices of 10c.

Sale spring shirt waists at 75c

IT'S THE CONTINUANCE of that great March sale of new spring of 1904 shirt waists that has been creating a sensation among smartly attired women this week.

85 doz. $2 waists at 95c
43 doz. $4.50 waists at $2
12 doz. $6.50 waists at $3.95
65 doz. waists at 75c
70 doz. $3 waists at $1.50
40 doz. $5 waists at $2.50

When cotton was cheap we bought thousands of yards of the richest 1904 designs. When the shirt waist manufacturers were on the verge of idleness we placed our orders, imparted our ideas from home and abroad to the expert fashioners, and they made up these exquisite waists at half the regular cost.

5,000 yards of fashionable all wool tweeds, per yd. 39c.

YOU'LL rightly declare that's the best value in dress goods in New York for Friday, but it's only one of the many you'll encounter at the Simpson Crawford Co.'s store to-morrow. You'll surely want to be among the early shoppers, and see and choose from the broadest and most exclusive showing in the city.

39c This offer of 5,000 yards of all wool tweeds is undoubtedly the most sensational that has been made this season—that splendid fabric that wears so well and makes such charming costumes for street wear.

75c Great sale 10,000 yards French voile at 75c a yard; another extraordinary Friday offering; black and more than 20 desirable shades; it's the very kind for which you'd pay $1 elsewhere; soft and sheer.
